Dear Friend:

Stories of hope. Stories of overcoming tragedy. Stories of regular people of faith who are working to end poverty, provide alternatives to war, and create beauty from rubble. These are the tales that we have been sharing with you through the 'Another World is Possible' Series.

In a post-religious-right America, Christianity is rapidly shifting and evolving. There is a new kind of Christian emerging across the landscape of America, a Church convinced that what they believe must affect how they live in this world. It's time for these stories to be told. I am embarking on a journey to lift up ordinary people doing extraordinary things through a feature length documentary. Entitled 'The Ordinary Radicals', this film will explore the question of what it means to be a Christian in America. As I follow Shane Claiborne and Chris Haw all over the country on the 'Jesus for President' tour, I will take detours to the forsaken corners of America to unveil the stories of everyday saints and local revolutions.

By interviewing Christians and non-Christians alike and examining the lives of Ordinary Radicals all over the country, I am hoping to present an alternate view not currently being represented by the mainstream media. A faith that seeks to do small things with great love. One where Christians are working alongside non-Christians to put an end to poverty, save the environment, and create jobs with justice and equality for all. A faith that brings people together to resolve their differences rather than remaining divided. This documentary will demonstrate that many of today's Ordinary Radicals are working for the same things as secular progressives. This will be the story of a peculiar people seeking not to bring the world to heaven, but a little bit of heaven to the world.

ANOTHER WORLD IS POSSIBLE!

But I cannot complete this project without the support of like-minded individuals. The current political climate and the changing face of faith in the United States make this a critical time to share these ideas with the public. Although we have been able to cover many of our expenses for this film through donated time and resources, we still need to raise $60,000 by May 2008 in order to ensure that we can complete the film in time for the election season. I am asking you to support this project in any way that you can. Please consider pre-ordering a DVD or purchasing other merchandise. If you are interested in being more involved in the project, consider making a donation or signing on as an Associate Producer. All supporters will be listed in the credits of the film, which will be released in theatres in Philadelphia and hopefully beyond this fall.

If you are not in a position to support us financially, please consider joining us in this project in another way:

In the margins of the United States, there lives a revolutionary Christianity. One with a quiet disposition that seeks to do "small things with great love," and in so doing is breaking 21st Century stereotypes surrounding this 2000 year old faith. "The Ordinary Radicals" is set against the modern American political and social backdrop of the next Great Awakening. Traveling across the United States on tour to promote the book "Jesus for President", Shane Claiborne and a rag-tag group of "ordinary radicals" interpret Biblical history and its correlation with the current state of American politics. Sharing a relevant outlook for people with all faith perspectives, director Jamie Moffett examines this growing movement.

As Shane Claiborne and Chris Haw write in the book, "This is not a set of political suggestions for the world; this is about invoking and embodying the alternative. All of this is an invitation to join a peculiar people- those with no king but God, who practice jubilee economics and make the world new. This is not the old-time religion of going to heaven; this is about bringing heaven to the world."

Featuring Interviews with: Becky Garrison, Shane Claiborne, Jim Wallis, Brian McLaren, Tony Campolo, Rob Bell, John Perkins, Brooke Sexton, Michael Heneise, St. Margret Mckenna, Logan Laituri, Zack Exley, Aaron Weiss and many more Ordinary Radicals.
